About this event

As Ontario moves to establish a cap-and-trade system and governments across the country increase investments in green infrastructure and technologies, how can Ontario businesses benefit? Where will the billions of new investment dollars flow? What policy changes are coming that will affect our businesses - and create new opportunities? Join us for a day of exploring the issues facing Ontario businesses and governments. Our expected attendees will include business leaders from across the environment and cleantech sector, senior government policymakers, financial and investment executives and members of the Ontario Public Works Association, Ontario's leading public works practitioners!

The day-long event will offer:

- A morning panel on the market opportunities of Ontario's new cap and trade system, with insights from leading financial and investment experts
- Profiles of Canada's leading environment and cleantech companies - presented in an innovative "Pecha Kucha" format
- A luncheon discussion with Paul Evans, Deputy Minister of Environment and Climate Change and David de Launay, Deputy Minister of Northern Development and Mines
- Afternoon "off-the-record" roundtables with senior officials from a range of ministries, who will discuss a number of topics, including waste, organics, water/wastewater/stormwater, brownfields, soil movement, approvals reform, and others
- The opportunity to meet a diverse network that can grow your business
- A closing networking reception in honour of National Public Works Week, co-hosted by OPWA and ONEIA. The reception will celebrate the 2016 National Public Works Week award winners and bring leading municipal infrastructure experts together with Ontario's environment and cleantech solution providers
